The Worships Performed by People with Special Needs in Islam

*Jameelah Abdul-Qader Al-Rifa'i

ABSTRACT

The Islamic shari'ah is based on simplification and relieving. It is a global, universal one that takes care of each individual equally without discrimination. Consequently, because the handicapped are an important part of the society, it illustrates that their need must be put into consideration, duties will be moderated and eased as much, but this moderation must be controlled by the condition of each. However, the shari'ah does not annulate the Islamic obligations. Therefore, these obligations should be performed by the handicapped as much as they can and Allah does not ask you some thing more than your strength and ability. To sum up, all these things lead us to the greatness of Islam, for it takes care of the healthy person and the one with special needs.
